I miss you, Grandma. The sun was shining bright for you yesterday. Michael and Matthew were glad that you were bringing your little lamb with you to heaven. They asked about going to visit you there but I told them they couldn't do that for a while. As I said yesterday in your eulogy you are so strong. You've held your head high and have been strong for your family for so long. You fought well. I remember 3 years ago when we thought we were possibly saying goodbye to you but you pushed through and blessed us for a while longer. Autumn is here. There are some beautiful red and orange leaves out there. It reminds me of that fall years ago when we sat together at your kitchen table and watched the leaves flying through the air and piling on top of each other on your lawn. I believe we had just gotten back from a craft fair at the fairgrounds. The other night after you passed, Natalie and I were talking about our numerous bingo hall adventures with you over at St. Daniel's. You always made sure we had a good luck charm of some sort and gave us money to go through the line and order any snack we wanted. It was amazing how often we went home with winnings, too. Some of my favorite memories with you are the small talks we had over tea and the late night yahtzee games up at camp. We'd plow through a bag of lays potato chips, scoop up an entire canister of heluva good french onion dip, and make our way through a liter of cream soda. Thank you for your love. You showed it in many ways. Whether it was in your "it's nice to finally hear from you!" even though I had called 3 days prior (by the way, it wasn't always easy to get through your phone line) or in the special gift you gave away to everyone at Christmastime or the way you told me after my car accident "You'll be okay. Take a pain pill, get up with those crutches and try every day." When you had difficult things to deal with in life you always were so strong in front of everyone else. I often wondered how you did it and how you dealt with those things privately but I imagine that strength you gave off is part of why some of us made it through some tremendously difficult times. Grandpa misses you quite a bit. You can see it in his eyes. But we will take care of him here. You just rest and get things ready for later on when it is his time to join you. We will make sure to pick on him for you. Thank you for all the gifts you've given to me. The love, support, laughter. The fun and adventures. I've been blessed by you and I hope you know just how much I love you. Please watch over me. I still need you.
