I worked with Cassie last year in Ms. Scott's room. She was always smiling and she would try as hard as she could in my reading group. I remember she was so proud of herself when she finally could master the word like. So every time we came upon the word like she would always point it out and would have to say it. In my group she would try and help the other students with reading. This year I could see how she was making great strides in her math and how she was finally understanding it. She was a sweetheart and she will be greatly missed. I am so sorry for you and your husband. My prayers and thoughts are with your whole family. Jodi Bauer
