I am standing on the sea shore, A ship sails in the morning breeze and starts for the ocean. he is an object of beauty and I stand watching him Till at last he fades on the horizon and someone at my side says: "he is gone." Gone? Where? Gone from my sight, that is all. He is just as large in the masts, hull and spars as he was when I saw him And just as able to bear his load of living freight to its destination. The diminished size and total loss of sight is in me, not in him. And just at the moment when someone at my side says, "he is gone", There are others who are watching him coming, and other voices take up a glad shout: "There he comes" and that is dying. An horizon and just the limit of our sight. Lift us up, Oh Lord, that we may see further

Larry, Jarrod and Michele were my neighbors growing up for about eight years which is one of the longest I've had. Although, I was closer friends with Jarrod I am heartbroken for all of them. Larry loved to play his music loud, grew his hair long and, dare I say, drove his car fast. He had an independent spirit and a sarcastic sense of humor. He painted his black Ford Tempo with my brother and they added polka dots. He was laughing all the way when they did that! If memory serves, they painted over the dots and added flames on it. Thanks for all the rides and pizza Larry! My sincere condolences to all his family and friends. May peace and comfort to you all.

This Friday we lost one of Earth's greatest uncles and someone who although I didn't try to communicate with that much, I wish I had tried harder because life is very difficult without him.

Uncle Larry was always full of fun and laughs. He knew all the best things to do, from showing us the guitar, to launching rocket cars in empty parking lots—even in winter, to hanging us upside down and swinging us around. He brought smiles to the room and our faces. We miss him very much. We love our Uncle Larry.

Larry and I were Conan/ Viking comicbooks nerds. We would talk endlessly about Sword and Sorcery novels, and the adventures of our favorite heroine, Red Sonja. He liked her a lot. 😊 But we became much closer when my Mother and I stepped out of the elevator at Brittonfield, and saw Larry sitting there. I introduced them and then realized Larry was a patient. I was used to to the drill at Brittonfield, so my heart broke for him. Over the next couple of years, we would see each other not only at the comicbooks store, but every other week for my Mother and Larry's treatments. Over time, Larry and I stopped with the typical manly handshake and moved on the a quick hug, I guess we were both lending a little strength and hope to each other, which lets face it, who doesn't need that?My Mom passed on Dec 17th 2015, and even in her final days, she always asked me about My friend Larry, as did Larry about her. I'll miss that kid. I loved that I could never tell if he was joking or not, until he'd laugh. He had a terrific wit about him, for sure.Goodbye for now Lar. See you again someday brother, and keep a horn of mead warm for me.
